[Home] [Mission] [History] [Values] [Ownership] [Contact HSC] [Location]

For nearly four decades, Hemlock Semiconductor Corporation has been a leading supplier of polycrystalline silicon.

- 1998 The scheduled completion of PHARO III, Phase II, expansion will add 35 percent more polycrystalline silicon production. Finishing expansion and technology enhancements will provide an ultra-clean polycrystalline silicon product in anticipation of future 300-400 mm wafer supply requirements.
- 1997 The completion of PHARO III, Phase I expansion resulted in an additional 40 percent polycrystalline silicon production capacity.
- 1995 The completion of PHARO II, Phase II, expansion resulted in a total site capacity of 4000 metric tonnes per year of polycrystalline silicon production.
- 1994 Hemlock Semiconductor became the worlds largest producer/supplier of polycrystalline silicon. (Completion of PHARO II, Phase I, expansion).
- 1992 Hemlock Semiconductor Corporation expanded its polycrystalline silicon production capacity by 20 percent and achieved ISO 9002 registration.
- 1989 The use of clean room processing for polycrystalline silicon finishing operations was improved and expanded.

- 1986 Hemlock Semiconductor Corporation tripled its previous capacity, focusing on leading-edge process technology, advanced chemical purification and parts-per-trillion analysis techniques.
- 1984 Hemlock Semiconductor Corporation became a Joint Venture of Dow Corning and two of Japan's largest single-crystal wafer manufacturers, Shin-Etsu Handotai Co., Ltd. and Mitsubishi Materials Corporation.
- 1979 Hemlock Semiconductor Corporation was formed as a wholly owned subsidiary of Dow Corning Corporation.
- 1969 The end of a decade in which Hemlock doubled its manufacturing capabilities three times, largely due to the growth of the electronics industry.
- 1960 The Hemlock, Michigan, site was selected for the first fully integrated polycrystalline silicon plant.
- 1957 Dow Corning corporation implemented technology to manufacture polycrystalline silicon.
